Please evaluate the course. (You might consider class readings, discussions, lectures, and activities; the intellectual challenge of the course; changes in your work over the semester; the value of what you learned.)

Great class, I really enjoyed all the novels and discussions. The discussions about the readings stimulated my intelligence and increased my ability to interpret texts.

Please evaluate the instructor. (You might consider the instructor's preparation for class; interactions with students in class; quality of the instruction; feedback on your work; and availability outside class.)

Excellent instructor. Very knowledgeable and enthusiastic about the novels and material. Always prepared for class w/ discussions & topics for very timely in handing back work and prompt in responding to students.

Please evaluate the work you put into this course. (You might consider the quality of your written work; your contributions to group and class discussions; and your commitment to the course.)

Put forth a vast amount of effort in the class and dedicated lots of time to reading the novels.

I found the course to be very intellectually stimulating. The novels we were required to read were very good and entertaining. They were significant to understanding the culture of the First Nations. The discussions that branched off the readings added to my understanding and ~~was~~ made connections to other novels.

Please evaluate the instructor. (You might consider the instructor's preparation for class; interactions with students in class; quality of the instruction; feedback on your work; and availability outside class.)

Paul was always prepared and loved hearing from students to further discussions of the texts, which made class more interesting. He gave great feedback on the essay assignments to improve our writing not only for his course, but for other courses as well.

I enjoyed the class and feel that I gave all the work required of the class attention.

The course reading list was great the readings were all very interesting but maybe consider cutting back on the number of books required through out the course. It's a bit intense and hard to keep up with.

Please evaluate the instructor. (You might consider the instructor's preparation for class; interactions with students in class; quality of the instruction; feedback on your work; and availability outside class.)

Paul Martin is fantastic but sometimes lectures for too long especially at the beginning of the semester. Class discussions are typically really engaging though.

My written work was ok and I participated well when I went to class but I struggled with attendance because of the early start and only twice a week schedule.

Great choice of novels - I really enjoyed reading these novels.

Discussion during class offered good insights about issues facing indigenous peoples.

Paul Martin offered great insights.

Always prepared w/ good points to talk about.

Very personable - overall good English instructor.

One thing - a little heavy on the talking - course would have benefited from more interaction.

I found myself at times wanting to talk but not having a chance.

~~Spent~~ Spent a lot of time reading the books.

Should have put more work into essays though - could have written better essays if I started them earlier.

I really enjoyed this course. We used many different materials in order to get a sense of indigenous literature from Canada. We read very interesting novels that kept ties between indigenous and First People's past as well as current issues. The blog we used was a great way to save paper as well as ~~get~~ post materials about authors to work as supplements to reading material.

Paul was an excellent lecturer. Most classes were highly discussion based. He's kind and understanding about work load/deadlines. I felt that he took care with my assignments and gave great, positive feedback as well as constructive critiques to help improve my work. He is also a fair grader.

Although I am generally quiet in class, I was always attentive, taking a lot away from lectures. I read all of the books and put thought and effort into the blogs. I also worked hard on my paper.

Could use more small group discussions, those worked the best & makes everyone more accountable for the reading. Blogs were hard to keep up on, I think an inclass freewrite may be better.

My favorite course this semester! I loved all the books, particularly Green Grass Running Water and Through Black Spruce. The reading was a little too fast paced for me. I've read every book cover to cover but often times wouldn't have finished it until the last day of discussing it or until we've started discussing the next book. I loved also gaining a sense of Canadian history and culture through the books we've read.

I put a lot of effort in this class. My first essay was not my best and I don't contribute to ~~the~~ class discussions unless I've finished reading the book ~~or~~ or if I'm 100% sure of myself. ~~I~~ When I did contribute I felt like I had something insightful to say. I also hope my 2nd essay impresses you a little more.

This was a great course. The reading material covered a wide variety of texts, times and places. I enjoyed the readings and the discussions. Perhaps reating the class in a circle would aid in getting discussion going easier.

I really did like this course. I never thought of ~~indigenous~~ indigenous Canadians as talented writers until I took this course. The only problem I had was the amount of reading assigned. The class was very well structured, the instructor had great intentions yet I didn't find the readings and the discussions to be thorough in their complete overview analytically. Yet this could be due to the lack of literature or our struggles to break away from student's mind forms that were internalized - to read novels. It was fair - heavy reading and a few papers - best way to structure a class. Blogs were annoying - much rather write something in class to evoke thought than do tedious internet work - seems somewhat strange to me ~~the~~ the reliance on blogs/internet for classes.

Please evaluate the instructor. (You might consider the instructor's preparation for class; interactions with students in class; quality of the instruction; feedback on your work; and availability outside class.)

Good, very nice, would benefit more from his views and interpretation of the books. Perhaps more history on the indigenous people - hard to form opinions on matters disconnected,

This course was outstanding, and it exceeded my expectations. The reading, lectures, and discussions in this class opened me up intellectually to a very different perspective and a whole set of new ideas. The discussions we had about the creation stories and the role of stories in general had a particularly strong impression on me. My only criticism is that I thought there were a couple of works, namely April Rainice and his ideas that maybe one could have been left out.

Professor Martin was a great instructor. He clearly had in depth knowledge & insight on the subject matter & presented things in ways that brought understanding. He was always very helpful. His instruction really made this a great class.

Please evaluate the work you put into this course. (You might consider the quality of your written work; your contributions to group and class discussions; and your commitment to the course.)

I always tried to put in a maximum amount of work to this course. I enjoyed participating in the class discussions & tried to do so often. Sometimes in hindsight I wasn't entirely satisfied with my written work, but I always put in an earnest attempt.
